Clipper Completes First Roundtrip on Transpacific Run

Freshly-Cut Flowers From Hawaii Decorate California Table Next Day

SIX DAYS TO MANILA

Pan-American to Establish Atlantic Service With Great Britain

ALAMEDA, Cal., (AP)—Flowers cut from Hawaiian gardens Thursday and letters written in Manila six days ago reached here Friday aboard the China Clipper. The big flying boat completed her first round-trip air mail flight to the Philippines by arriving seven hours ahead of schedule.

Her cargo was rushed away in trucks so the mayors of New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Omaha and Salt Lake City might have "bird of paradise" bouquets not more than 36 hours old on their desks Saturday.

By steamship her Manila cargo would still be two weeks away and her Hawaiian consignments four days. Seventeen hours, one minute from Honolulu, 2,400 miles, and 63 hours, 24 minutes from Manila, 8,000 miles, she is flying time.

Swept along by tail winds, the sky liner reached a speed as high as 175 miles an hour from Hawaii. The average speed for the 16,000-mile trip was two miles a minute. Total flying time was 123 hours, 15 minutes. Forty-eight bags of mail, approximately 100,000 letters, and an express cargo of photographs, motion picture films and flowers were brought back.

The Clipper, carrying a seven-man crew, left here November 22. Stops were made both ways at Honolulu, Midway and Wake Island and Guam.

To Fly Atlantic
WASHINGTON (AP)—British and American interests were reported near agreement Friday night on plans for establishment of transatlantic mail and passenger service by air.

In contemplation was a co-operative arrangement between Pan-American Airways, already flying the Pacific, and British Imperial Airways, private concerns. Both would enter the field with a reciprocal arrangement for use of landing facilities.

Nearing the end of a deadlock of several years, delegates were talking of an agreement under which the American concern would be permitted to use Bermuda for a stopping and refueling point, while the British company would be licensed to land in America.

With experimental flights still necessary to show the most practicable routes to be followed, there was discussion of an arrangement permitting both companies to land their planes in Newfoundland and Ireland. However, for the present, the emphasis was on the Southern route by Bermuda and the Azores.

The discussions were confined to a committee of experts from Great Britain, Canada, the Irish Free State and the United States. They will present recommendations to a full meeting of the delegations at the state department Saturday.

Norris to Speak for the President

Nabaskan Will Abandon Senate Race to Campaign Nationally

WASHINGTON—In what was interpreted as a bid for a cabinet post in the event of President Roosevelt's reelection, Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska, Friday announced that he would not seek another term in the senate because it would interfere with his campaigning for Mr. Roosevelt.

His statement was the latest of an exchange of compliments between himself and the president when Norris supported in 1932. Recently, President Roosevelt said that Norris should be kept in the senate "as long as he lives."

In a political career extending over nearly 50 years, Norris always has run as a Republican. He bolted the party in 1928 to support Alfred E. Smith and supported Roosevelt in 1932. If his

Over-Issue County Warrants Causes Suit on Treasurer

Jackson County Appeal May Set Precedent for All of the Counties

By O. P. HANES

LITTLE ROCK, (AP)—An appeal brought by the state last week in a Jackson county suit ultimately is expected to be heard by the state supreme court.

The question involved is whether county treasurers and their bondsmen can be held liable when the treasurer cashes warrants which have been issued in excess of the county revenue for a fiscal year.

The supreme court decision, scheduled to be handed down in the next few weeks, will deal only with the issue of whether circuit courts have jurisdiction in such cases. A ruling that they did would send the case back to Jackson county for trial on its merits, with another appeal in prospect regardless of the outcome.

"As far as we are able to determine, the question of whether a treasurer can be sued when he pays warrants in excess of county revenue for the year has never been decided by our supreme court," Bryan Sims, chief county accountant for the comptroller's department, said.

The suit was filed by prosecuting attorney Roy Richardson, seeking payment of approximately $500 from former Jackson county treasurer Austin Murphy and the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York, his surety.

The prosecuting attorney charged that Murphy redeemed and cashed two warrants which were void because the year's revenue had been expended. He alleged that the treasurer's failure to refuse to cash the warrants was a neglect of official duty and a breach of bond.

One of the warrants involved was for $499.19 and the other for $150. The defendant's demurrer, contending that the circuit court did not have jurisdiction, was sustained by Judge Marcus Bone and the suit dismissed.

Richardson appealed in the name of the state, asking the supreme court to order the case tried in lower court. The complaint said the warrants did not constitute a lawful charge against the county because the $36,611.61 credited to the general fund had been exhausted by the allowance of "other claims chargeable to the fiscal period to which these orders and warrants are chargeable."

Cities Built Inside Mountains, Is Life as H. G. Wells Sees It by the Year 2054

Startling View of Things to Come Is Portrayed by Film

Famed Author's Novel of Future Is Filmed by British Company

Wells Remembered for Correct Prophecy on Aviation in War

By MILTON BRONNER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Eng.—H. G. Wells has always been known as the author of large heavy books telling all about what has been, or of sprightlier books telling what his fertile mind imagines will be.

But now this 69-year-old man who has written some 85 books, including his own autobiography, finds himself beginning another chapter in his life. He's gone overboard for the movies.

London and New York are looking forward to the January premier of Wells' first picture, "Things to Come." Word has gone around that this production, worked out between Wells and Alexander Korda, Britain's ace director, is going to have an astounding array of mechanical gadgets and futuristic settings, some bigger and more imposing than Mr. Wells' "Outline of History," itself.

Mounting House His Cities

There will be an amphibian tank, capable of swimming lakes, rivers and seas, crashing up through the frozen surface of a river. There will be shown the destruction of civilization in a 30-years war opening in 1940, with Brooklyn Bridge destroyed, New York's skyscrapers shattered and bleak, and Palm Beach a scene of utter desolation, prey to hungry dogs.

There will be aerial combats and development of a "peace gun" that just puts the enemy to sleep, insuring bloodless victory. There will be strange cities of 2054, built inside mountains, without windows, a jumble of machinery for sunlight, air and every necessity. There will be a "space gun" built to shoot a pair of lovers up, over, and down the unseen side of the moon, to land again in the Pacific. The vast machines for digging out the subterranean cities will make your eyes pop out.

Some of the sets are the biggest ever built on either side of the Atlantic. Many are "shot" from the top of a specially-built 100-foot tower, and the "space gun" is shown on a scale indicating a length of 1500 feet.

Meeting Korda by chance, Wells became impressed with the possibilities of the movie through the persuasive exposition of Korda. The result was that Wells took his "The Shape of Things to Come," and rewrote it into a scenario. He rewrote it twice more. He did more than write. He went out on the sets and learned something of the picture business as they went along. He made changes in the plot as they were found necessary. He has become a 24-karat film fan, and is likely to co-operate with Korda in

U. S. Holds 40% of World Gold Store

Tide of Precious Metal Still Flowing Toward American Shore

WASHINGTON (AP)—Imports of gold—in an ever-increasing tide—have swollen America's holdings to a new high of 10 billion dollars. Receipts in the week ended December 4 totaled $135,000,000, and brought United States holdings above 40 per cent of the world's supply.

European interests were credited with stimulating movement of the metal, $800,000,000 worth of which has been received in the past 12 weeks.

New Bonus March Urged by McAdoo

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON.—The advice of Senator McAdoo to world war veterans that they mobilize and march on Washington "in your hundreds and thousands" and make congress "stay with you until a satisfactory bonus bill is passed," sent shivers up the spines of a lot of people.

Those who remember the famous "Battle of Washington" on July 28, 1932, when President Hoover ordered out federal troops to evict the bonus marchers from the capital, have no desire to see a repetition of that tragedy.

Senator McAdoo's advice, if followed in all sorts of complications. For one thing, the job of policing a march of such proportions would be tremendous. It wouldn't affect Washington alone. Every state, county and America Can't Let World Down—F. D.

Surest Way to Keep Out of War Is to Stop Any War Anywhere

WASHINGTON (AP)—Declaring that the United States "should not let the world down" in the current war crisis, President Roosevelt said also Friday that this country has done "its share toward restoration of peace."

The statement, made in a letter November 14 to Bishop G. Ashton Oldham of the Episcopal Diocese of Albany, N. Y., but published only Friday, was interpreted as principally a reaffirmation of the administration's neutrality policy.

The statement did not mean a departure from the traditional policy of avoiding foreign entanglements, it was said here, nor was there any acknowledgment that this government has participated in a concerted international effort to end the Italo-Ethiopian war by sanctions.

The president said that this government in many respects has "gone beyond the actions so far taken by other nations."

The president's letter to Bishop Oldham was written in reply to one from the churchman late in October declaring America should "not let the world down" by standing aloof in the East African war situation.

Mr. Roosevelt said he agreed with the bishop in his contentions. America, he said, is not "standing aloof from what it considers its obligation in the East African war. It stands aloof," he said in effect, merely insofar as is necessitated by its determination to follow its own independent methods in dealing with the matter.

The president also agreed that "the only sure way for us to keep out of war is to have no war anywhere." He cited steps this government took before the outbreak of hostilities between Italy and Ethiopia, "designed to bring to bear in the interest of peace the weight of this country's moral influence as a co-sponsor and signatory of the Pact of Paris."

Exports to Italy Up 35% in October

American Shipments to Great Britain Also Show an Increase

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A thriving trade with Italy was revealed Friday by Commerce Department reports, despite administration efforts to discourage sale of potential war supplies to belligerent nations.

The figures disclosed also a big jump in exports to Great Britain. The Interior Department reported that despite a drop in exports of gasoline to Italy, exports of that essential military item—crude oil—to Italy were multiplied by more than six in October as compared with September.

Although the present ban on shipments of munitions to Italy and Ethiopia became effective October 3, quickly followed by efforts to restrict cargoes of possible military materials by moral suasion, the month showed a jump of 35 per cent over September in exports to Italy.

PARLEY ON MONDAY

Meanwhile, Compromise Appears Likely in North China Crisis

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—The Japanese delegates to the forthcoming international naval conference advised the British Admiralty Saturday that Japan demands naval parity with the United States and Great Britain in reality and not merely in name.

Further, the Japanese told the British that no other questions can be discussed at the parley, which opens next Monday, until Japan's demands for parity are met.

The original Washington treaty provided a naval ratio of five units each for Great Britain and the United States, to three units for Japan. This caused it to be known as the "5-5-3 treaty."

China May Get Peace

PEIPING, China.—(AP)—A tentative compromise agreement in North China's autonomy crisis was reported unofficially Friday night.

The Rengo (Japanese) News Agency said a temporary settlement had been effected at a conference between emissaries of the Chinese National government and leaders of North China.

This plan, Rengo stated, will be submitted to Maj. Gen. Hayao Tada, Japanese military commander in North China, and to the Nanjing government here.

Rengo's report came after 17 Japanese airplanes had roared over the city, center of the crisis, during the day. Chinese circles said the maneuver was designed either as a demonstration in behalf of the independence of North China or to intimidate the negotiators from Nanjing into making concessions.

Creation of a North China commission, it was said, is provided in the compromise plan. This commission would be given wide powers of self-government and the new Nanjing currency reform program, involving nationalization of silver, would not be applicable in the region.

A spokesman for the Japanese army here said:

"It is most regrettable that American and British statesmen are misinterpreting our activities. We have no intention of interfering with the administration of North China."

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Simple Facts Mingled With Wrong Ideas to Make Diet "System"

One "system" of diet that has been widely advertised is named for a Doctor Hay who was graduated in 1891 from a New York college. He has been associated at various times with sanatoriums in which most of the emphasis is placed on diet.

Finally, he wrote a book called "Health Via Food," which is mostly misinformation concerning what food will actually do in the human body. In this book the author talks a great deal about acidosis and deficient drainage.

This system really consists of a few simple pieces of advice about diet. One is that you eat sparingly and only when you are hungry; two, that you eat foods that are nourishing; and three, that you avoid eating at the same time two foods which cannot easily digest together.

Every one will agree that it is inadvisable to overeat, and every one will also agree that it is well to eat foods that are nourishing.

That part of the system which says that proteins and carbohydrates and starches cannot be successfully digested when taken at the same time, and that eating them together results in acidosis and all sorts of resulting disease is, as I have already explained in this series of articles, absolutely without any scientific foundation.

To prove that there was no foundation for these ideas, Dr. Martin A. Rehffuss of Philadelphia tested the diet on 200 normal men. He also tried them on a great many sick people. Some were fed mashed potatoes and

Today's Health Question
Q.—How many years of additional life have been gained for human beings by the development of modern medical science?

A.—No accurate records are available regarding the life of man before the 18th century. It is said that the average length of life in Europe during that century was about 19 years, and that it has moved up century by century to 25 years, 32 years, 40 years, and now 60 years. The rate of increase was gradual until near the end of the 19th century.

chopped beef together, as foods which represented concentrated starches and proteins.

Doctor Rehffuss discovered that it took only three minutes longer for the sick people to digest the beef and potatoes together, than it did to digest the beef itself.

This system of diets also leans strongly on mixtures of salads of vegetables prepared according to fancy formulas, such as "Foundation of Youth Salad," "Pale Moon Cocktail," "Chicken Bunny Salad," "Starlight Chicken," and "Parcel Post Asparagus." There are all sorts of directions for torturing carrots into funny shapes.

These diets, of course, are relatively harmless, except that it is a nuisance to eat them. The worst difficulty is that the person who is sick will try to cure himself by using only these diets, without finding out what is really wrong.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

The noble game of contract bridge seems at last to be simmering down to something that an ordinary mortal can play without combining all the graces of a mathematical wizard and a blindfold chess player.

Time was when the mere multiplicity of systems alone was enough to drive the neophyte to strong waters. It made for a lot of high-powered conversation—and only the golf bug can outdo the bridge addict when it comes to talking about his pet game—but it also made for a sharp pain in the neck for the hopeful soul who wanted to play the game, but didn't care to devote his life to it.

All this is by way of preface to the news that something resembling a fool-proof book on bridge is at last on the market. It is called "Cubertson System Self-Teacher," it is written by Louis H. Watson and I. H. Bloom, and it seems to harmonize all the various systems into one compact and easily grasped procedure that you can get the hang of without driving yourself to complete dizziness. I wouldn't know much about the theoretic soundness of it; but it is worth noticing that this is the first book on bridge to bear on its cover an endorsement from William E. McKenney, secretary of the American Bridge League, and author of daily articles on contract, which ought to be sufficient testimonial to its worth. I can testify that it presents a system to understand and follow and makes contract, at last, look like a game and not a life work.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Today we hear the term "wishful thinking" used so much. Perhaps it is the time just before Christmas to get under this word and see what it means.

Mothers are inclined to believe it means "wanting" something, and so it is, in a way. But to set your mind on a sled is not actually "wishful thinking" as the psychologists use the term. It is good to want. When we lose that, we lose more. The trouble with the unhappy too-rich is that they have nothing left to want, not material things, anyway.

It is when wishing becomes an "emotional" habit that it does harm. Just wishing in general for something we never will have; living in a dream world that can never come true.

Little by little she draws away from her family, obsessed by the desire to live at the other house. Then on one day she finds herself an orphan. She is taken by her relatives. She grieves now for what she has lost. Instead of being happy she is the reverse. She wants everything as it was. The kindness of her parents now becomes apparent.

But to go back is impossible. So she searches for another dream world. Over the fence she made the acquaintance of a pretty girl who passed each day on her way to dancing school. She told Irene that she was to be a great dancer some day. In four years, she said, her hair was red and curly and she had violet eyes. Irene began to hate her own blond hair, and to dream of wearing cloudy costumes and having a whole theaterful of people applauding.

Unable to Face the Present
She begged to learn dancing. Her aunt said she could. But once the lessons started she was unhappy. Again she sailed away in her wish world. Again and again. She was searching for something she would never find. Her hair was red and curly and she had violet eyes. Irene began to hate her own blond hair, and to dream of wearing cloudy costumes and having a whole theaterful of people applauding.

Wishful thinking takes many forms. It is a cruel master. Sometimes when one desire is not fulfilled, the wisher seizes on it and broods to the point of obsession. Such a child should be kept busy. Interested and busy. The habit of work in older people, the necessity for "digging in," often dims the unsustainable dream world. It helps with children, too. But once a wishful thinker, always one—more or less.

It is normal to wish, but abnormal never to be satisfied. Ambition is fostered by healthy wishing. But the real wishful thinker is not fond of working out his own ideas as a rule. He is unhappy wherever he is. He seldom reaches his Utopia. Such a child needs our understanding and guidance.

Glorifying Yourself

By Alicia Hart

"Bending and stretching exercises that cause a direct pull on muscles and tendons in the back of the legs burn off fatty tissue, thereby reducing weight on the thighs," says Donald Loomis, trainer of Hollywood stars. That's a good thing to remember during coming weeks when you're sure to eat pound-cake and holiday-day foods that threaten your figure. "You can't reduce the lip bones, of course, so don't wear yourself out trying to obtain a V-shaped figure. Women aren't supposed to have broad shoulders and narrow hips. However, the perfect figure does have symmetrical thighs that are firm and round. "Deep knee bending is useful both for developing muscle and for burning off fat. To reduce excess weight, the movements should be rapid. To develop muscle, they must be done slowly and deliberately. The old riding-the-bicycle routine will slendelize legs and things if you do it quickly. It will develop them if you do it slowly, making the muscles stretch and pull with each motion. Rolling back and forth on the floor will help to reduce the thighs, too. "Another good exercise to slendelize the thighs is done flat on your stomach on the floor. Clasp your hands behind your back, raise your chest upward. Then, keeping knees straight and stomach flat, raise the legs slowly upward in the direction of the small of the back. Hold the position a few seconds, then lower feet to the floor again. When you have mastered the technique, repeat rapidly ten times night and morning.

The firing of the "Nine O'clock Gun" at Portsmouth, Va., is a survival of ante-bellum days when negroes were not allowed on the streets after 9 p. m. and were thus summoned to their quarters.

She (after a quarrel): "Leave this house. I never want to see you again. Go this instant."

He: "I have one last request to make before I go."

She (sweetly, or very sweetly): "Well what is it?"

He (brutally): "Before I leave forever, would you mind getting off my lap?"

With All My Love

BEGIN HERE TODAY
After the death of her parents, lovely DANA WESTBROOK comes from abroad to make her home with a grandmother she has never seen.

Dana's half-sister, NANCY WALLACE, recalls Dana's coming. Dana's grandmother, Roger's young granddaughter, will marry rich RONALD MOORE and is elated when he falls in love with her. Dana, meanwhile, has become attracted to DR. SCOTT STANLEY.

Nancy, who masks her love for Ronald behind an antagonistic attitude, anxiously watches Dana's interest in Dana. Just as anxiously, PAULA LONG watches Dana's attraction to Dana.

Ronald becomes jealous at Scott and goes away. Dana wonders what has happened. Mrs. Cameron asks Scott to stop visiting Dana. Believing Dana sanctions her grandmother's interference, Scott ceases his visits. Dana goes to a dance, wondering if Scott will be there.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVI

EVERYONE, apparently, was at the College Club dance. The ballroom floor was crowded, and most suffocatingly, though it boasted one of the largest dancing areas in town.

Scanning the crowd, Dana saw Paula Long several times, but she failed to find Scott among the dancers. Apparently he hadn't come after all. It made all the difference: most of the buoyancy left her mood.

"It's not in here," she said. "Let's go outside for a moment." Roger, dancing with her, smiled. Sometimes a suggestion to go outside meant the girl was inviting a bit of flirting. Dana, through the weeks he had known her, hadn't seemed that kind of girl. Rather the opposite. But then you never could tell.

They went out on the porch. And suddenly, there was Scott leaning against a post, smoking. Dana put a hand on Roger's arm. The hand trembled a little. "Let's go back," she whispered. "I feel better now."

"I feel better now," Roger repeated. "You look all in. What you need is something to pick you up. Let's go downstairs and find it."

They were quite near the figure leaning carelessly against the porch pillar. Dana, her heart throbbing violently, ran up the red flag of courage and recklessness.

"Fine," she agreed, with what she hoped was a nonchalant inflection. The man against the post moved suddenly, barring their way. "I think this is our dance, Dana," Scott said, with such cold intensity that Roger was backing off awkwardly before he realized it. "Sorry. Sorry," Roger said. "See you soon."

THERE was a moment of silence after Roger had gone. Then Dana said firmly: "It isn't our dance and you know it."

"When little girls start being silly," Scott answered coolly, "it's necessary to do something about it."

"When did you qualify as my protector?" Dana's voice was trembling. "I can't see that you've got a right to interfere. I'm not a little girl, and I'm able to take care of myself. I don't care for your interference." Her gaze broke.

"I gathered as much from your grandmother," Scott said. "She made it pretty plain."

"Made what plain?" Dana's amazed eyes met his.

Scott bent slightly, holding her gaze. Then he straightened. "I guess there's a little matter to be cleared up between us," he said. There was a note in his voice that stirred Dana strangely.

"Get your coat. Never mind—you can use mine," Scott linked his arm through hers, closed his hand over her hand.

Dana found herself walking with him along the side driveway. They located his car and Scott took off his coat and placed it about Dana's shoulders, against her protest.

"Even if I were not a doctor I'd know what night driving in an outfit like that would do for you," he said.

"I never seem to meet you in a conventional mood," Dana said. Scott smiled. "I'm not a conventional person."

"So I've discovered. I'm always running away with you, or you're picking me up and running away with me. And then," her voice faltered a little, "you're running away from me."

"Sent away."

"No," Dana objected, "you just stopped without a word. Without even telephoning, or writing, or dropping by to say you would be busy. And what do you mean, anyway, by saying my grandmother—?" Her voice broke treacherously. Tears rolled down her cheeks.

SCOTT guided the car expertly to the side of the drive where a willow conveniently dropped a protecting screen. He took Dana in his arms and they kissed while the world spun around them.

With Dana's soft white cheek pressed against his hard, tanned one, Scott said, "You didn't know the old lady was sending me away? She had some idea I couldn't afford you. And I can't, of course. Just the same, we're getting married, aren't we?"

"Of course," Dana said happily. "It will be a hard pull." Scott's voice was sober. "Not much of a life I'm offering you. We're going to be poor as hell, honey."

"What do I care?" said Dana with the recklessness of young love.

"You might regret it," Scott argued. "You might not be able to stand that sort of life."

"You don't look better," Roger repeated. "You look all in. What you need is something to pick you up. Let's go downstairs and find it."

They were quite near the figure leaning carelessly against the porch pillar. Dana, her heart throbbing violently, ran up the red flag of courage and recklessness.

"Fine," she agreed, with what she hoped was a nonchalant inflection. The man against the post moved suddenly, barring their way. "I think this is our dance, Dana," Scott said, with such cold intensity that Roger was backing off awkwardly before he realized it. "Sorry. Sorry," Roger said. "See you soon."

THERE was a moment of silence after Roger had gone. Then Dana said firmly: "It isn't our dance and you know it."

"When little girls start being silly," Scott answered coolly, "it's necessary to do something about it."

"When did you qualify as my protector?" Dana's voice was trembling. "I can't see that you've got a right to interfere. I'm not a little girl, and I'm able to take care of myself. I don't care for your interference." Her gaze broke.

"I gathered as much from your grandmother," Scott said. "She made it pretty plain."

"Made what plain?" Dana's amazed eyes met his.

Scott bent slightly, holding her gaze. Then he straightened. "I guess there's a little matter to be cleared up between us," he said. There was a note in his voice that stirred Dana strangely.

"Get your coat. Never mind—you can use mine," Scott linked his arm through hers, closed his hand over her hand.

Dana found herself walking with him along the side driveway. They located his car and Scott took off his coat and placed it about Dana's shoulders, against her protest.

"Even if I were not a doctor I'd know what night driving in an outfit like that would do for you," he said.

"I never seem to meet you in a conventional mood," Dana said. Scott smiled. "I'm not a conventional person."

"So I've discovered. I'm always running away with you, or you're picking me up and running away with me. And then," her voice faltered a little, "you're running away from me."

"Sent away."

Tigers' New Boss Started Cochrane

W. O. Briggs Picked Mickey as Manager After Bad 1933 Season

By EARL HILLIGAN
Associated Press Correspondent
DETROIT.—(AP)—Walter O. Briggs, for years a Detroit industrialist-millionaire and now, at the age of 58, the new sole owner and director of the world champion Detroit Tigers of the American league, should make an excellent "boss" for the man who brought two penants and one world title to Detroit.

Both Briggs and Manager Mickey Cochrane are known as "hard losers" because they have the will to win and have won in careers carved out of widely separated fields. Briggs himself picked Cochrane to lead the Tigers out of the doldrums after the 1933 season.

The new owner joins the select group of baseball magnates after years of hard work, foresight and tenacity have made him independent wealthy. For years a fan, he became directly connected with the game in 1920, when he and the late John Kelsey purchased quarter interests in the Detroit Baseball company out of the estate of William H. Yawkey. Briggs later bought Kelsey's holdings.

Briggs Takes Up Option
Frank J. Navin, who died of a heart attack recently urged Briggs to buy into the club then, and down through the years there existed a fine bond of friendship between Briggs and Navin. Their friendship led to an agreement that when one died, the other would have an option on the other's baseball holdings, and Briggs announces he is exercising that option by buying Navin's half share from the heirs.

Briggs rose from a factory workbench to his present position of power. In late years he has worked just as hard as he did early in his career, but has found time for play. He likes to win, whether his business or games, and those close to him believe he and Cochrane should make a combination which opposing clubs will find hard to beat.

Born in Ypsilanti, Mich., February 27, 1877, Briggs is a descendant of pioneer stock, his great-great grandfather having been a soldier in the Revolutionary war. His father, Rodney Davis Briggs, was for 50 years an engineer for the Michigan Central railroad.

At 15, young Walter went to work in the car shops of a railroad at $15 a week. In 1907, he entered the employ of the Everitt Manufacturing Co. as a body trimmer. He rose to shipping clerk, then general handy-man in the office. Promotions came fast, and in a few years he was one of the active heads of the company. In 1914, Briggs bought the company and the Briggs Manufacturing company was born. Today it supplies most of the bodies for the Ford Motor Co., employs thousands of men and has plants here and abroad.

He Plays Dominoes
Briggs plays contract bridge and dominoes frequently. He loves horses, has a fine yacht, and is a devotee of the theater. He has a home in Detroit, one at Bloomfield Hills and another in Miami Beach, Fla. Thirty-one years ago he married Jane Elizabeth Cochrane. The family consists of Mrs. Briggs, four daughters and one son, Walter Owen, Jr., who is known to intimates as "Spike" and who probably will be associated with the club in some capacity with the club.

The elder Briggs is a member of the New York Yacht club, the Lambs, the Players and the Larchmont Yacht club, of New York, in addition to numerous Detroit clubs and organizations.

He always has admired Cochrane. When reports said Cochrane was for sale by Connie Mack, the Philadelphia Athletics' head man, Briggs told his partner, Frank J. Navin, to arrange the purchase of the peppery catcher. Mack refused, Briggs persisted that Cochrane should be bought, contending he would make a greater manager than he was a player.

The deal finally went through—Briggs quietly underwriting the deal for $100,000 after Navin had hit through the depression, was unable to swing it alone.

The Briggs-Cochrane combine is likely to be hard to beat.

AAA Suit Threat to Other Programs

Other Spending Plans May Be Upset by Test of Processing Tax

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH
Associated Press Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Many government attorneys see much more than legality of the AAA processing tax hanging on the supreme court's forthcoming ruling on that measure.

Spending of tax money requires, theoretically at least, a specific grant of power authorized by the constitution; but the only clause of the document that can find which gives the AAA that power is the "general welfare" provision for improving the condition of the entire country.

It was under this clause, that attorneys say, that the Louisiana and Alaska purchases were made, that agricultural extension is carried on, that relief is given the unemployed, that the Tennessee valley authority is operating, and that the public health service, Smithsonian Institution, and other old-time government agencies, are continued.

Outlaw Gilmore Is Captured

The government's petition to the court asking for a hearing of the case declared, on the other hand, that the act "represents the final decision of congress that federal assistance was and is needed to restore the normal functioning of the agricultural life of the nation and that such restoration was and remains vital to the halting of the disastrous period of depression which has threatened the country's very structure."

Millions Affected
It added that congress adopted the law after several years of considering the necessity for farm relief and recently had approved its administration, adding that "the provisions challenged in this case directly affect thousands of taxpayers, indirectly affects millions of consumers, and involve hundreds of millions of dollars of internal revenue."

Approval of the AAA by congress at the last session in passing the amendments to the act, which attempted to forbid suits to collect taxes already paid, was questioned, however, in a supreme court ruling of November 25 which directed eight southern rice millers to pay the levy on rice into a special depository instead of the treasury pending a decision on constitutionality of AAA.

Amendment Again
Many government officials have declared privately their belief that a ruling of unconstitutionality on AAA by the court immediately would result in a demand for an amendment to the constitution if the decision were based on irregularity of the taxes. However, it should hold only that the delegation of the taxing power to the executive branch of the government is unconstitutional, as it did in the case of code-making under NRA, then collection of processing taxes could be continued, they believe, because of the redefinition of tax rates in the last session of congress.

A man is at his finest toward the finish of the year; He is almost what he should be when Christmas season's here; Then he's thinking more of others than he's thought the month before, And the laughter of his children is a joy worth toiling for. He is less a selfish creature than at any other time; When the Christmas spirit rules him, he comes close to the sublime. For at Christmas kindness rules him and he puts himself aside, All his petty hates are vanquished and his heart is open wide. Oh, I don't know how to say it, but somehow it seems to me That at Christmas man is almost what God sent him here to be. —Selected.

With the passing of the Thanksgiving holidays, thoughts now turn toward Christmas, and the perennially beautiful story of the Star of Bethlehem, guiding the shepherds to the Babe that was born in a manger proclaiming a season of joy and good cheer, and its attendant festivities, that usually center about yuletide song services, church celebrations, homecomings, and other worthwhile programs. The Friday Music club has announced its annual Messiah program, there will be the usual Christmas cantata at the First Baptist church, special music is being prepared for the two services at the First Presbyterian church on Sunday, December 22, the usual White Christmas program will be held at the First Methodist and First Christian churches, with special music for the Sunday preceding Christmas. The Friday Music club will also celebrate with its annual Christmas tree. There will be numerous and various family dinners and reunions, "making the heart strings hum with a tune of perfect gladness." On or about December 12 the eight trees at the four doors of the city hall will be lighted, adding their beauty to the season of joy and cheer. The business houses' Christmas trees are already out and the show windows of the downtown district will do credit to a much larger town, for they are beautiful and not only proclaim their wares but shed an inward glow that finds true expression in "Merry Christmas." Holiday memories last a lifetime and if accompanied by the spirits glowing in love, cheerfulness peace and good will, it makes that lifetime worthwhile. In closing this impression, I cannot help thinking that the secret of so much joy at Christmas time, is the fact that it is then that people give the most, and giving is what makes joy in the world, perhaps even more to those who give than to those who receive.

It has been my pleasure to attend two beautiful club Christmas programs this week, from which I imbibed the spirit so strongly, that I felt I must do my part toward passing it on, hence the above.

What a splendid treat the Friday Music Club gave to the music lovers of our city when they brought the celebrated harpist, Angelo Cortese to us, and what fine judgment was used in presenting the Choral club with their beautiful songs on his program.

The most humorous column I have read this week was Paul Gallico, sport writer's description of undressing and dressing in a sleeper plane on his recent trip from Dallas, where he had journeyed to see the game between T. C. U. and S. M. U.

This rain of the past day or so has destroyed all of the beautiful autumn colorings, and Nature has donned her drag gown of winter.

The Cotillion club, composed of the young ladies of the city, entertained at a very delightful benefit bridge on Friday afternoon at the New Capital Hotel. The beautiful decorations stressed the yule-tide note, featured by a large Christmas tree, the boughs snow dusted and alight with twinkling jeweled incandescents, making a surpassingly lovely effect. Smaller decorated trees were used throughout the card room, where fourteen tables were arranged for the players, with the accessories still further stressing the Christmas theme. Attractive prizes wrapped in the season's colors were given for high score at each table. Delicious "homemade" candies were served throughout the game. The sum realized from the benefit will go toward the charity projects, the Cotillion club will sponsor.

The Future Home Maker's club, sponsored by Miss Ruth Taylor, superintendent of the Home Ec department of Hope High School, met at the Home Ec cottage on December 5. The meeting was called to order by the president, Sara Lou Ledbetter, with 48 members responding to the roll call. Misses Melba Lee Russell and Mary McAdams contributed toward a very interesting program on Mrs. Ellen H. Richards, the founder of home economics. During the business meeting the constitution was read by the secretary, Fay Atkins and Miss Lorene Green gave instructions for the installation services to be held at the Home Ec cottage on December 17, followed by a Christmas party.

Continuing the Lottie Moon Week of Prayer services being held this week by the W. M. U. of the First Baptist church, Mrs. Hugh Jones led a very inspiring service at the church on Thursday afternoon. An appropriate devotion was given by Mrs. Gus Haynes followed by papers by Mrs. W. B. Mason, Mrs. Earl Bowden and Mrs. Jimmie Embree, with prayer by Mrs. Edwin Dossett. Following the song, "Give Your Best to the Master," a most interesting paper, entitled "Tithes Withheld" was read by Mrs. Nona Steele and a talk was made by Mrs. Webb Lasater. A duet sung by Mrs. Cecelia Gibson and Mrs. W. R. Rogers, with Mrs. E. L. Padgett at the piano closed the service.

Circle No. 5 of the W. M. U., First Baptist will have a Christmas tree at 2:30 Monday at the home of Mrs. Wallace R. Rogers, all members are urged to be present, bringing a 10 cent gift for the tree.

Mrs. R. V. Herndon has returned from a visit with relatives and friends in Little Rock.

The Sunshine Boys, radio stars,

KWKH Shreveport, La., sponsored by the Junior Young Ladies, Missionary Society of the Methodist church, will present a program at the city auditorium at 7:30 Monday evening, 10-15 and 25c admission.

Sunday evening at 7:30 at the church, in observance of Woman's day, the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Christian church will give a play entitled "Christian Womanhood Facing New Frontiers." The public is cordially invited to this service.

Mrs. R. W. Bayless, who has been the guest of her daughter, Mrs. K. G. Hamilton and Mr. Hamilton left Saturday for her home in Gurdon.

CLUB NOTES

Allen
The Allen club met Tuesday, December 4, with Mrs. B. M. Jones. There were 20 of our 25 members present and one visitor, Miss Griffin could not be with us on account of illness.

The meeting was opened by our president, Mrs. P. J. Holt. We sang a song then an interesting devotion was conducted by Mrs. Finwick. The business session followed.

The Allen club is to be joint hostess with Hopeville at the council meeting at First Baptist church in Hope, December 6. It was necessary for us to spend the remainder of the afternoon making plans and practicing our part for the Christmas program to be given then.

Tempting refreshments were served by the hostess.

Kidnap-murder of Charles A. Lindbergh's infant son.

insistence not to run for re-election is final this time (he has made similar announcements in previous campaigns), his reluctance may be based partly on the embarrassment of choosing under what label to run next year.

Again, Norris, ardent foe of the utilities, may have an eye on the position of attorney general which might be offered to him if the president is re-elected.

"Mutiny on the Bounty," Great Adventure Story, at Saenger

"Mutiny on the Bounty," great sea picture showing Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Saenger, carries off away with the sheer intensity of its drama. Although a historical romance, wrung from the actual records of the British Admiralty, it is far more absorbing than pure fiction.

It is a superb achievement in motion pictures, a historical picture as it should be and one that will live for years to come as one of the most exciting sea tales ever screened.

The picture is the true story of the voyage of H. M. S. Bounty 150 years ago, on a scientific expedition to the South Seas. It tells of the tyranny of a brutal captain who drove his crew to mutiny, of the life and loves of the sailors in a tropical paradise and the dogged pursuit of Captain Bligh for the men who had fed him to the wrath of the sea by casting him adrift in an open boat.

"Mutiny on the Bounty" lives up to all the advance praise that has shouted the picture's merits around the world. Its scenic beauty, sometimes stark and cruel, is unsurpassed. It is headed by Charles Laughton, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone, is incomparable.

Disputed Baby Is Awarded to Girl

Mrs. Muench Loses Out in Prolonged Contest at St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(AP)—The baby claimed by a former St. Louis society matron and an unwed Pennsylvania servant girl will go to the servant if the St. Louis Court of Appeals upholds the findings of a special commissioner.

Rush H. Limbaugh, the commissioner who heard testimony in the habeas corpus suit of Anna Ware, the domestic, to recover a baby boy from the home of Mrs. Nellie Tiplon Muench, reported to the court Thursday the child was Anna's. He recommended it be returned to her.

"Mrs. Muench did not give birth to a child," said the lawyer. "For the determination of the issue of identity there is scarcely a precedent," said Limbaugh's report. "Even the scriptural story related as evidence of the wisdom of a renowned ancient king does not present an exact parallel or furnish practical aid here for the solution of the problem of identity. The evidence offered by the parties to the cause and the inferences to be legitimately drawn therefrom must alone furnish the key to the determination of that problem."

Anna, 19, sobbed with joy. Mrs. Muench, 44, wife of Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, repeated that she "never saw" Miss Ware's infant.

Miss Ware's child was born here last August 17. Mrs. Muench several days later announced that a son had been born to her August 18. She had been childless through more than 20 years of married life.

New Bonus March

city on the line of march would be affected.

And the experience which authorities have had in the past with such "marchers" makes them shudder at the prospect of having to deal with another such situation.

Weather A Deterrent
Probably the best insurance, however, against a bonus march at the coming session of congress will be the weather. Senator McAdoo, in sunny California, may urge the veterans to march on Washington, but the zero and sub-zero weather which will be prevailing at the time congress is in session is something else.

All bonus and other "marches" on Washington in the past have been made either in the spring or summer.

Although the veterans may not actually descend on the capital in the manner McAdoo suggests, administration leaders have taken cognizance of the seriousness back of the senator's proposal.

Something must be done about the bonus this winter and done quickly.

Action Certain
McAdoo's advice to the veterans is evidence of the pressure that will be exerted on those senators who stood with the president on his veto of the bonus bill passed in the last session of congress.

On January 13-15 days after the session opens—the house will be called on to dispose of the Patman bill providing for immediate payment of the bonus.

From the administration's standpoint it is vital that it be ready by that time with some sort of an acceptable compromise plan. That some kind of a bonus bill will be passed no one denies.

NEW CHURCHES

Second Sunday of Advent

10:15 Morning Prayer.
10:30 Catechetical instructions.
11 High Mass in honor of the Feast of the Day, the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary. This is the patronal feast day of this local church; and of the Church in the United States.

4:00 Study Sunday Visitor.
5:00 Benediction with the Most Blessed Sacrament, and end of the Novena in honor of the Feast of the day.

His Excellency, Most Rev. Lynch, D. D., Bishop of Dallas, will administer the Sacrament of Confirmation in the evening at Sacred Heart Church, Texarkana, Texas. A class from Hope and this Mission District will be confirmed.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Work has gone forward steadily on the new education building of the First Baptist church, and has been completed in some of the departments. The Primary and Beginners Departments will see for the first time the beautiful new quarters which are to be theirs. The rapid completion of these two departments was made possible by a generous designated gift from one of the deacons of the church to them.

The other departments will be completed in the very near future and until that time they will continue meeting as they have been in recent months.

The regular meetings scheduled for Sunday are as follows:
Sunday School—9:45.
Morning Worship—10:55.
B. T. U. at Lewisville—2:30.
B. T. U.—6:30.
Evening Worship—7:30.

The pastor will preach at both hours on Sunday, and will continue a study of the Book of Hebrews on Wednesday at the mid-week prayer service. These studies are held immediately after the officers and teachers meeting, and begin at 7:45.

Music

Notes of Interest to Music Lovers of Southwest Arkansas

Junior Music Contest
Mrs. J. O. Tully, Junior Contest chairman for the Arkansas Federation Music Clubs, announces that the junior music contest sponsored by the federation will be held at the time of the biennial convention in Little Rock, next spring.

The contest is open to members of all federated music clubs, the members of which have attained the maximum age of 18.

Contests will be enrolled in following classes: Piano, piano ensemble, two pianos (eight hands), two pianos (four hands), violin, cello, boys voice, girls voice, hymn playing, original composition, string quartet, and trio of violin, cello and piano.

The winner in each event will receive a National Federation Junior pin, also a certificate from the National Federation of Music Clubs.

A silver loving cup will be awarded to the Junior Club scoring the highest number of points. Each first place that is won by a contestant will count five points for his club toward winning the cup and winning of second place will count three points.

Enrollment Fee
An enrollment fee of $1 will be charged all solo entrants, and $2 for ensemble groups. Half of the registration fees are sent to help defray expenses of conducting the Junior Music Contest of the National Federation Music Clubs and the other half is retained for the same purpose in the A. F. M. C. Elimination contests, will be held in each of the six districts of the State Federation of Music Clubs, just preceding the state contest. Each district will be allowed to send two contestants in each class for entry in the state contest.

No awards will be made to district winners; neither will fees be charged in district contests, as it is held merely for the purpose of selecting winners to compete in the state meet.

The hymn-playing contest will be held under the supervision of Miss Blanche Kelly of the music department, College of the Ozarks, Clarksville, state chairman of music in religious education. Entrants in this contest, should write to Miss Kelly for the required numbers in hymn-playing.

Bulletins containing all required numbers, rules and full information are being sent, Mrs. Tully says, to all Junior Federated Music Clubs of the state. Anyone desiring to secure the bulletin or any further information, should address Mrs. J. O. Tully, state junior contest chairman, 1204 Bishop street, Little Rock.

night. Whittier told farm officials he was certain Jones was drowned as the two tried to cross the river soon after their break. Captain Ben Maddox would not accept the report as final and was continuing his search.

Whittier and Jones, with others, had been assigned to clean the stockade Thursday afternoon as part of the work preparatory to abandoning the camp. The two carried out a box of trash and the guards momentarily inside the building, the pair ran around a woodpile and into nearby woods. Their absence was noted 30 minutes later.

CAPTAIN EASY

AT THE END OF THE R.R. LIES BUGABOO, A RIP-ROARING, TWO-FISTED MINING TOWN.

CHIEF PRIDE OF BUGABOO IS RAW LIKKER AND FRIVOLOUS GALS. THE OLD TOWN'S WILDER THAN A MOUNTAIN GOAT, AND EVEN THE WATER'S HARD.

AND EASY, NUMB FROM THE FIRST BLIZZARD OF WINTER, STAGGERS TO A LIGHTED DOORWAY. HE ENTERS.

INSTANTLY, THE MERRYMAKING STOPS. DEATHLY SILENCE. TWO DOZEN HOSTILE EYES GLARE AT THE INTRUDER.

THEN A FRIZZLY BLONDE BREAKS THE SILENCE.

HALLO, BEBBY, HOW YOU LAK TO BUY ME WAN PRINK, YES?

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS, YOU TURNIP?

I LAY THEES FALLA UNDER DE TABLE.

WOP!

ARE WE GOIN' LET DAT NO COUNT FALLA DO DAT TO BLACKIE?

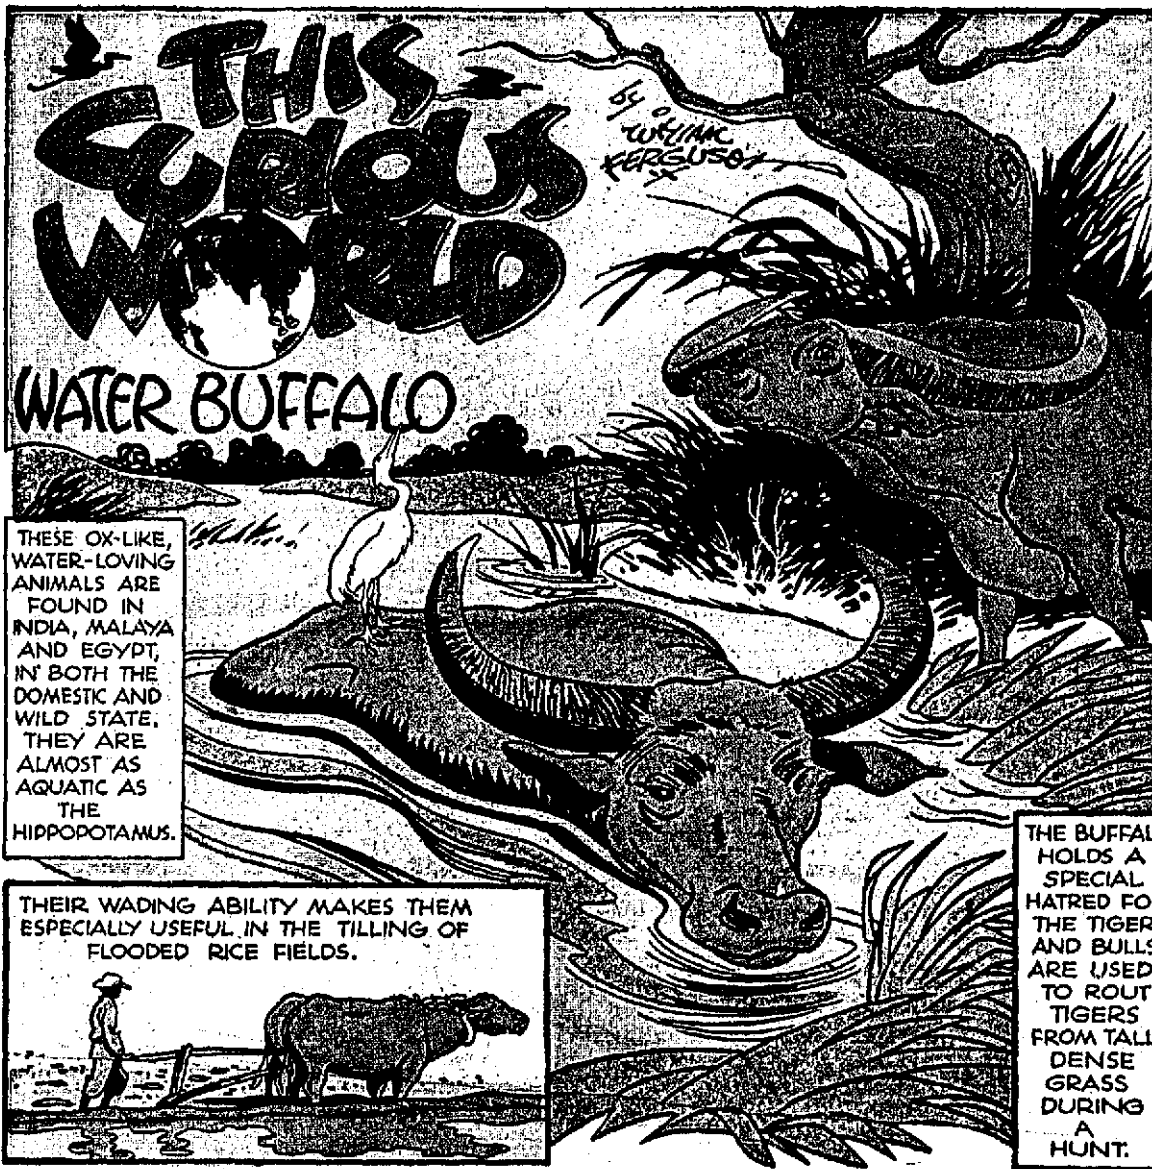

NO, BY GRACIOUS! WE LAY FU' HIM, OUTSIDE.

WE SMOSH HIS FACE IN!

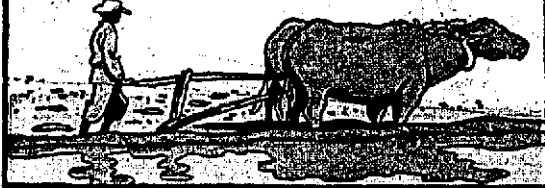

HEY, YOU! DIS A RESPECTABLE DIMP? I DON' ALLOW NO TROUBLE. OUTSIDE! BEAT IT!

THESE OX-LIKE, WATER-LOVING ANIMALS ARE FOUND IN INDIA, MALAYA AND EGYPT, IN BOTH THE DOMESTIC AND WILD STATE. THEY ARE ALMOST AS AQUATIC AS THE HIPPOPOTAMUS.

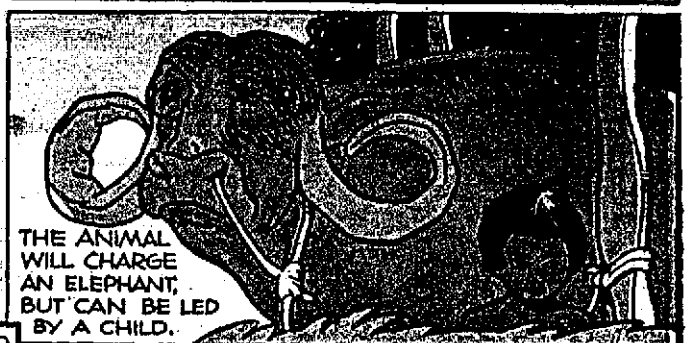

THEIR WADING ABILITY MAKES THEM ESPECIALLY USEFUL IN THE TILLING OF FLOODED RICE FIELDS.

THE BUFFALO HOLDS A SPECIAL HATRED FOR THE TIGER, AND BULLS ARE USED TO ROUT TIGERS FROM TALL DENSE GRASS DURING A HUNT.

INDIAN NATIVES KEEP GREAT HERDS OF BUFFALOS FOR THE SAKE OF THEIR RICH MILK AND BUTTER.

THE ANIMAL WILL CHARGE AN ELEPHANT, BUT CAN BE LED BY A CHILD.

HOLD STILL, BOYS...DON'T MOVE! I HAVEN'T A GUN! ONE FALSE MOVE, AND THEY'LL JUMP YOU!!

I'M GLAD MY TEETH AREN'T FALSE... THEY'RE CERTAINLY M-MOVING!!

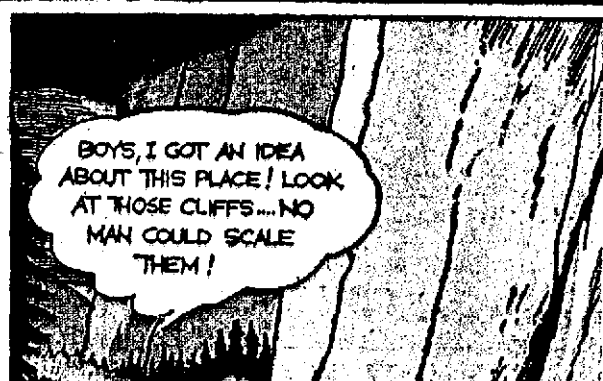

WELL, I'LL BE COW-KICKED BY A MULE...LOOK AT THAT!

GOSH, THAT COUGAR ACTUALLY IS PLAYING WITH THAT LAMB!!

WONDER WHAT KIND OF A PLACE THIS IS, ANYWAY? THOSE ANIMALS HAVEN'T EVEN ATTEMPTED TO HARM US!!

BOYS, I GOT AN IDEA ABOUT THIS PLACE! LOOK AT THOSE CLIFFS...NO MAN COULD SCALE THEM!

CHANCES ARE, THIS PLACE HAS NO ENTRANCE, OTHER THAN THAT UNDERWATER PASSAGE...IT'S THE ONLY WAY IN OR OUT!!

THAT EXPLAINS WHY THESE ANIMALS ARE SO TAME...THEY'VE NEVER SEEN HUMANS BEFORE!

G-GOSH! LOOK!!

WHAT MAKES YOU SAY THESE ANIMALS HAVE NEVER SEEN A HUMAN BEFORE?

I'M HERE, AMN'T I?

ALLEY OOP

MONSTERS OF THE PREHISTORIC PAST

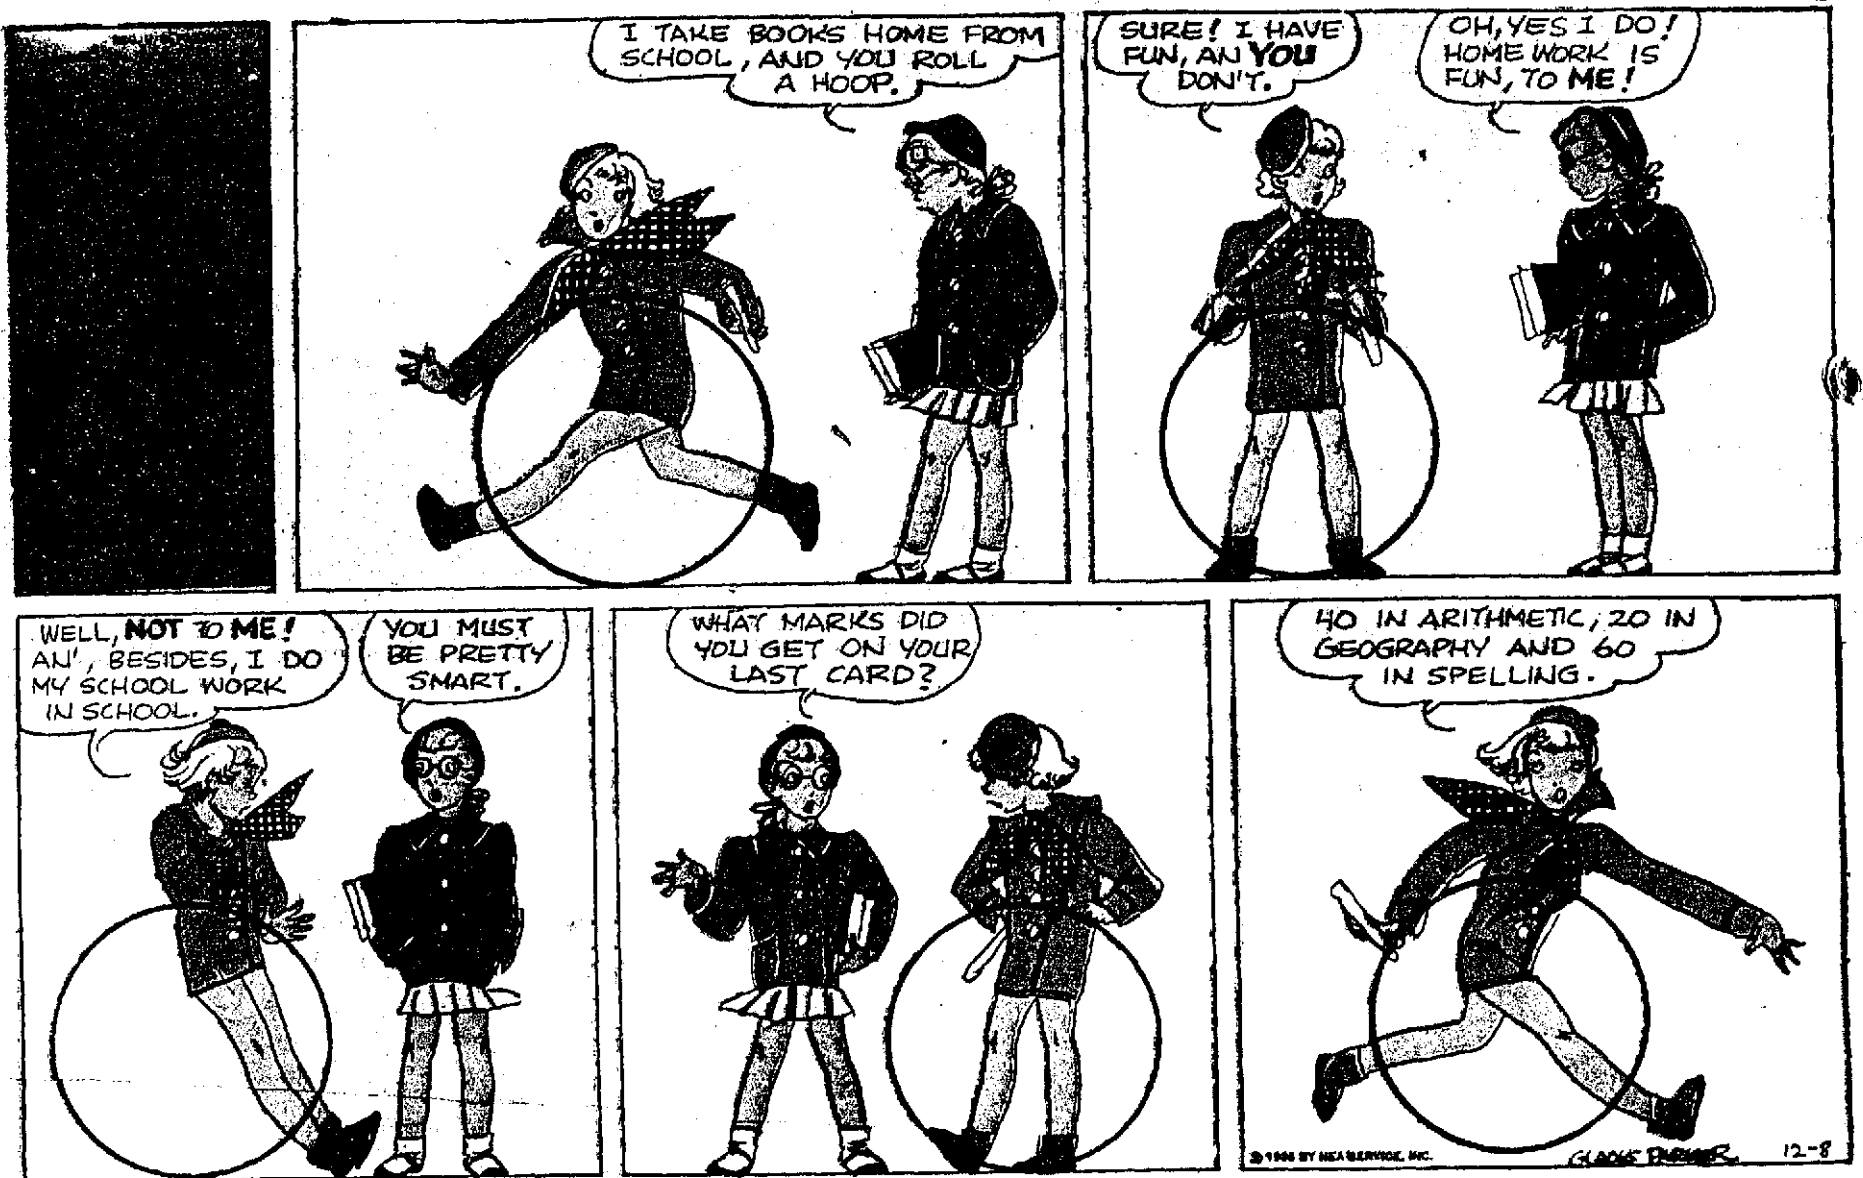

FLYING LIZARDS

PROBABLY THE MOST BIZARRE DEVELOPMENT ATTAINED BY THE SAURIANS, DURING THE AGE OF REPTILES, WAS THAT OF THE FLYING LIZARDS. MOST OF THESE REPTILIAN INVADERS OF THE AERIAL DOMAIN WERE QUITE SMALL, AS IS THE SPECIMEN ILLUSTRATED HERE. HOWEVER, ONE GROUP, KNOWN AS PTERANODONS, GREW TO BE ENORMOUS - WITH A WING SPREAD OF NEARLY THIRTY FEET. WHILE OUR PRESENT DAY BIRDS UNDOUBTEDLY ARE OF REPTILIAN ORIGIN, THE FLYING LIZARDS POSITIVELY WERE NOT A STEP IN THEIR EVOLUTION.
